ABSTRACT

This edition marks the 23rd year of a longitudinal study of counselor preparation in the United States and its Territories. This first volume covers aspects of programs and personnel. The current edition, in response to user feedback, features some modifications in content and reporting of data reported by institutions. Each graduate degree program appears separately with related information shown, including degree level, name of major, number of students enrolled and graduating yearly, accreditation held, admission requirements, clinical experience required in clock hours before graduation, total academic hours required for graduation, placement of graduates expressed in percentage by settings, and uniqueness of the program. The book is divided into eight chapters. Chapters 1 through 7 provide information on the content and uses of this book, research design and data sources, accreditation bodies, the format for reporting data, master's level majors and institutions, doctoral level majors and institutions, and institutions listing Ed.S., Post-Degree, and CAS, Chapter 8, which constitutes about four-fifths of the book, presents the actual institution data. An appendix lists programs that did not respond to the survey. Also featured are a bibliography and an index which can be searched by content and by faculty name. (RJM)

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Special thanks go to those individuals in institutions of higher education who completed the data collection forms. Without their cooperation, the book could not have been produced. Also thanks need to be expressed to staffs in accreditation organizations who supplied the latest information about which programs were accredited and what accreditation was held.

The tracking of reports and compiling of data were no small tasks. The hours of work by Susan K. Spille, graduate assistant working with Richard Wantz, and Cindy Long and Sheila Sheward, working with Joe Hollis, deserve extra thanks for performance beyond expectation. The amount of work they expended is like the iceberg, only the tip of it shows on casual observation but the true mass of it is really present.

PREFACE

The past 23 years have included many changes in how higher education institutions have prepared counselors/therapists. Those changes are a reflection of several important aspects of the counseling profession including public recognition and acceptance, legislation at the state and national level, establishment of state boards for certification and licensure, specialization within the profession, forming of accreditation bodies for review of preparation programs, increase in clinical experience before graduation, increase in academic course work at the graduate level, shift of clinical experience to treatment or application settings, increased activities by boards to certify counselors, research data to support the effectiveness of counseling, and an expanded knowledge base.

As the previously listed aspects change, so do counselor and therapist preparation programs change, as has been shown by data collected through the Hollis and Wantz longitudinal research over the past 23 years and eight national reports. As specialization occurs in the profession, the number of degreed programs increases. For example, the specialization in marriage and family therapy/counseling has resulted in several higher education institutions adding master's degree programs with a major in marriage and family therapy/counseling. Other specializations also have resulted in new master's degree programs. These changes have been reported with each new publication of the Counselor Preparation book.

In response to feedback from users of prior editions, the content and reporting in this eighth edition have been modified. Each graduate degree program has been reported separately with related information shown including degree level, name of major, number of students enrolled and graduating yearly, accreditation held, admission requirements, clinical experience required in clock hours before graduation, total academic hours required for graduation, placement of graduates expressed in percentage by settings, and uniqueness of the program.

One indication of change is the amount of information collected and reported. For this eighth edition, two volumes are produced—Volume I with programs and personnel and Volume II with status, trends, and implications. The intent is to respond to feedback and to provide more information in a meaningful, useful manner.

We welcome your comments on uses made of this edition, suggestions for modifying the next edition, and knowledge of any omission of an institution or program.

Chapter 1

CONTENT AND USES OF VOLUME I

Professions are in a continuous change process due to new theories, techniques, research findings, and results from application. The counseling profession is no exception, and, as a result, the preparation programs are in a state of flux whether in an institution of higher education or a training unit associated with a treatment center.

During the last half of the 20th century and more specifically during the last 25 years, counselor and therapist preparation programs have changed significantly in content and in number of institutions. Parallel to those changes have been other major modifications including accreditation of programs, increased clock hours of supervised clinical experience, specialization in kind of counseling (e.g., mental health, marriage and family, rehabilitation, etc.), and state laws that certify or license counselors. Each of these latter changes directly or indirectly has affected counselor preparation.

LONGITUDINAL RESEARCH

During the 1960s, the U.S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare: Office of Education published two directories of counselor education (1964 and 1968). In 1970, Hollis and Wantz undertook a study of counselor preparation programs. The results were published in 1971. Hollis and Wantz have continued their research and have reported periodically data collected and have provided an analysis of those data, trends, and implications. The reports have been issued in 1971, '74, '77, '80, '83, '86, '90, and now in '93.

This longitudinal research reflects changes and provides bases for deducting trends and looking at implications. Some kinds of data collected have remained similar from one collection period to the next, e.g., name and address of administrative units offering programs, faculty names and related information, degrees offered, and kinds of programs. Other kinds of data collected have varied from one data collection period to another in response to changes in programs and reports from faculty, students, administrators, and other users as to what is needed. For example, in this eighth edition, information was collected and reported separately by degree level on each program according to the areas of specialization recognized by accreditation organizations. The research has been in-depth and constructed for yielding meaningful, useful results.

To avoid quoting from unconfirmed reports, only original data supplied directly from the source have been used. For example, all institutional data are supplied by the department chair or a person he or she designated to complete the form, and accreditation held by different programs was taken from lists supplied by accreditation organizations. Thus, no secondary sources were utilized.

Comparison among reports from these 24 years of study tell a story. In summary, counselor preparation programs have responded to meet changes occurring in various aspects of our society. The extent of courses, kinds of program specialization, number of institutions offering programs, and clock hours of clinical experience all have increased. Many other significant changes have occurred and have been reported with each new edition, now totaling eight.

DATA COLLECTION

A nine-page Data Collection Form was sent to all institutions that were known to have a counselor and/or therapist preparation program plus more than 200 others that had appeared in one or more sources as possibly having a program. This was an attempt to be comprehensive in listing all institutions and their programs.

Follow-up letters and Data Collection Forms were sent to all nonresponsive institutions. If no response was received after a given time, to simplify the information requested, a one-page short form was sent. As a result, some institutions have more information reported than others.

Responding programs that did not appear to meet the criteria for inclusion in the study (see Chapter 2) are not included. For those institutions that did not respond, we have no primary source from which to confirm or deny the presence of one or more programs. These institutions and their mailing addresses are listed in the appendix of this Volume. Complete information on criteria for inclusion, data sources, and collection procedures is supplied in Chapter 2.

RELATIONSHIP TO ACCREDITATION

The accreditation process has had and continues to have a significant impact on counselor preparation programs. Specialization of counselors has resulted in a creation of new degree programs, and the decision of what to include in programs, to a large part, has been based on accreditation requirements as stipulated by the appropriate accreditation bodies.

Today, five accreditation bodies exist to provide the assistance. Of the different existing master's and doctoral degree programs with only one exception, no overlap occurs (marriage and family programs can be accredited by AAMFT and CACREP). The five accreditation bodies are gaining in stature among not only higher education institutions but also certification and licensure boards, hiring officials, and students.

Some counselor preparation programs may prepare competent counselors and/or therapists and not be accredited. The reason or reasons may be related to such things as the following: accreditation is in process but has not as yet been completed, the program is new and time has prohibited completion of meeting the criteria, campus resources (financial and/or personnel) are not yet available, campus regulations have slowed the process, or accreditation process for the program is new and sufficient time has not occurred for completion.

In this eighth edition, accreditation granted by any of the five accreditation bodies is shown for each program. The bases for listing a program's accreditation were lists published by the accreditation bodies. If a specific program was not on any of the lists, then the wording "None Indicated" was added for that program following the word "Accreditation:".

LISTING OF ACADEMIC PROGRAMS

Academic programs are listed four ways: (1) by states; (2) by institutions, listed alphabetically within states; (3) by degree level; and (4) by major emphases within the program. The first three are shown in Chapter 4. The master's level programs listed by majors are shown in Chapter 5 with the name of those institutions offering the program. For the doctoral level programs, Chapter 6 contains the same kind of information. Institutions listing Ed.S., Post-degree, and CAS programs are identified in Chapter 7.

USES OF THE BOOK

Students and professionals have reported many uses of the first seven editions. Since the last edition, they have suggested changes in data collection and reporting that have been incorporated into this eighth edition. These changes were made in response to those suggestions and will result in fulfilling a need for data to achieve additional uses.

In lists that follow are the uses students, faculty, administrators, and others have reported. The list is not meant to be all-inclusive but rather to show how the information is being used and perhaps to serve as a stimulus for additional uses.

Uses by Faculty and Department Staffs

For Identifying Faculty

- To obtain the name of the institution where a faculty member teaches.
- To obtain the complete name of a faculty member.
- To obtain address or telephone number so as to communicate with a faculty member.
- To know the composite listing of faculty at a given institution.

For Identifying Trends

- To identify courses being added by different departments.
- To identify courses being dropped by different departments.
- To review changes anticipated within different departments, e.g., change in faculty FTE, applying for accreditation, adding or dropping programs.
- To compare 1993 data with 1990 data.

For Professional Development

- To identify faculty in other institutions who teach in comparable programs.
- To identify faculty with whom to share ideas and materials.
- To keep abreast of changes in the profession.

For Program Modification

- To review uniqueness of different programs.
- To correspond with faculty and staff in departments of other institutions regarding what and how a topic or program is administered in other institutions.
- To exchange ideas with faculty in other institutions.
- To obtain statewide or national data to support local programs or modifications.

For Research Studies

- To locate names and addresses of faculty and/or departments in order to send research forms.
- To use base data in the book and expand the information through additional research.
- To identify areas needing additional information that could be obtained through research.
- To identify areas not covered.

For Review of Programs in a Given Area

To review all programs in a given specialty area (e.g., counseling psychology, rehabilitation, marriage and family therapy).

To consider similarities and differences among programs.

To study a given aspect of a specific program (e.g., admission requirements, clinical experience clock hours).

Uses by Students (Present and Potential)

For Correspondence Information

To obtain correct name of department.

To obtain mailing address.

To obtain telephone number.

To identify degree and title of major offered.

For Identifying Differences among Programs

To compare programs at different institutions.

To study the kinds of programs at different institutions.

For Identifying Differences among Specialties

To review requirements and understand how they do or do not vary from one specialty to another.

For Locating Institutions Offering a Specific Kind of Program

To identify institutions offering a given program.

For Narrowing Scope

To study differences among programs in a specific area so as to narrow the scope of institutions to contact for more information.

For Reviewing Placement of Graduates

To study the placement of graduates from a specific kind of program.

To compare placement of graduates from institution to institution.

For Preparing for Interview

To learn about programs offered and names of faculty at a given institution before going for an interview.

For Research Potential

To identify unanswered questions.

To determine kinds of data available.

To use data available in the book to study aspects not reported.

For Sensing Course Modifications

To review courses being added by departments.

To review courses being dropped by departments.

For Sensing the Scope of Counselor and Therapist Preparation

To understand the majors possible.

To recognize the different degree levels.

To understand the different accreditation bodies and which kinds of programs they accredit.

For Studying Number and Gender of Graduates

To study the number of graduates by kinds of programs and/or by geographical area.

To identify the ratio of female to male graduates.

Chapter 2

RESEARCH DESIGN AND DATA SOURCE

Collection of data and making interpretations so as to have meaningful information are challenging and interesting to researchers. The past seven longitudinal studies provided the bases for what and how data were to be collected for the 1993-95 eighth edition.

Development of the Data Collection Form, selection of programs to be included, obtaining data, interpreting responses, and analyzing data were important aspects of the longitudinal study. This chapter is a report on those actions.

MODIFICATIONS IN DATA COLLECTED

To assure that data collected would be meaningful, a letter dated April 3, 1992, was sent to 49 leaders in the counseling profession requesting their "suggestions regarding how to make the publication better serve present-day needs." We asked them to share "How do you use information from the book?" and "What kinds of information would you like to have in the next edition?" A Business Reply Mail envelope was enclosed with the letter.

Replies from that letter together with information received by telephone, correspondence, and personal interviews were pooled to identify what data to collect. Another consideration was collecting new data that could be analyzed against previously collected data from the past 22 years.

The new collection form was the outcome. In general, the major change was to collect separate information on each degree program at each institution. By so doing, more specific information was collected and could be compared from program to program and institution to institution. Essential information on each program was collected including number of enrollees, number of graduates by gender, admission requirements, necessary clinical experience in clock hours, academic hours required for graduation, placement of graduates, and uniqueness of the program.

Another major addition to reflect changes in the profession was to include the American Association of Pastoral Counselors list of programs and respective accreditation of programs. Thus, five accreditation associations and recognition of their accreditation classifications of programs were considered throughout the collection and reporting of data.

CRITERIA FOR PROGRAM INCLUSION

Criteria were established to determine whether or not a program was to be included or omitted in the publication. Criteria utilized to determine inclusion of a counselor or therapist education program were as follows:

1. Be designated as an approved counselor or therapist education program by one or more of the following five accreditation bodies:

    a. American Association of Pastoral Counselors (AAPC) approved and provisionally approved training programs.

    b. American Psychological Association (APA), fully or provisionally approved programs in counseling psychology.

c. Council for Accreditation of Counseling and Related Educational Programs (CACREP) full or provisionally approved counselor education and college student personnel programs.

d. Commission on Accreditation for Marriage and Family Therapy Education (CAMFTE) graduate programs and training centers.

e. Council on Rehabilitation Education, Inc. (CORE) approved programs in graduate rehabilitation counselor education.

Or meet the following criteria:

2. Have a designated graduate faculty with specific time devoted to counselor education, therapist education, and/or student affairs practice in higher education programs.

3. Have a graduate counselor education and/or therapist education and/or college student personnel program within an academic unit of an accredited college or university within the United States or its territories. (If accredited by one of the five accreditation bodies, the program will be listed regardless of geographical location.)

4. Have a graduate level program at the master's degree level or higher with academic credit offered through its own accredited college or university.

SOURCES FOR IDENTIFYING PROGRAMS

Sources used for identification of instructions and respective academic units included the following:

1. ACA Council for Accreditation of Counseling and Related Educational Programs. (1992 & 1993 editions). Directory of accredited programs. Alexandria, VA: CACREP.

2. American Association of Pastoral Counselors. (1992 & 1993 editions). American association of pastoral counselors 1993 directory. Fairfax, VA: Author.

3. American College Personnel Association. (1990). Directory of graduate preparation programs in college student personnel. Washington, DC: Author.

4. American Psychological Association. (1991 & 1992, December). Accredited programs in counseling psychology. American Psychologist.

5. Chi Sigma Iota Membership Committee. (1992 & 1993 editions). Chi Sigma Iota directory. Athens, OH: Author.

6. Commission on Accreditation for Marriage and Family Therapy Education. (1992 & 1993 editions). Accredited and candidacy status programs. Washington, DC: AAMFT.

7. Council on Rehabilitation Education Inc. (1991 & 1992, November). CORE recognized master's degree programs in rehabilitation counselor education. CORE News. Champaign, IL: Author.

8. Hollis, J.W., & Wantz, R.A. (1986). Counselor preparation 1986-89: Programs, personnel, trends (6th ed.). Muncie, IN: Accelerated Development Inc.

9. Hollis, J.W., & Wantz, R.A. (1990). Counselor preparation 1990-92: Programs, personnel, trends (7th ed.). Muncie, IN: Accelerated Development Inc.

10. Requests from institutions to be included in the next edition received within the last 3 years from academic units that met the criteria for program inclusion.

11. Counselor education programs identified by State Department of Education Guidance, Counseling and/or Career Education section(s) in each state.

DATA COLLECTION FORM DEVELOPMENT

The Data Collection Form (Figure 2.1) was developed for use in this edition and reflects changes in counselor/therapist education. The 1990 Data Collection Form served as the base, and modifications were made to keep the form in concert with trends and suggested changes from academic unit personnel. Program and course modification items that decreased in importance in prior years were removed, and items that were frequent write-ins were included. Modifications enabled a collection of information that followed through with prior data and remained consistent with trends.

A significant change made in this edition was to collect responses according to program majors as designated by the five accreditation bodies plus a designation for any other program major(s). Thus, at the master's degree level, the majors were Community Counseling, Marriage and Family Counseling/Therapy, Mental Health Counseling, Rehabilitation Counseling, School Counseling, Student Affairs (college student personnel), and other counseling specialties. At the doctoral degree level, the majors were Counseling Psychology, Counselor Education, Marriage and Family Therapy, and other counseling specialties. In Chapter 8 of this book, data are reported accordingly for each academic unit. Data were collected in the areas as presented in the Data Collection Form (Figure 2.1).

DATA COLLECTION PROCEDURES

All 798 academic units identified in the United States and its territories plus Canadian institutions with accredited programs as listed by one or more of five accreditation bodies as offering a counselor and/or therapist and/or student affairs practice in higher education programs were sent on September 1, 1992 a two-page letter of request and explanation, a nine-page Data Collection Form, and a prepublication form for a copy of the study (Figure 2.1). A "2nd Request" follow-up letter and the data collection forms identified above were sent to 616 administrative units that had not responded by October 22, 1992. A one-page reminder letter was sent as a third request on November 13, 1992 to 496 units not responding. On January 7, 1993, the final written request was sent to 387 units not responding. This final request included a one-page letter and a one-page abbreviated Data Collection Form (Figure 2.2) Telephone calls as reminders were made to CACREP-accredited programs not responding to written requests.

RESPONSES RECEIVED BUT NOT INCLUDED

The original list to whom data selection sheets were sent had not been screened completely as to whether or not each institution met the criteria for inclusion. As these data became available, addition interpretation had to be made as to whether or not the criteria were met. Of the responses received, 76 programs were omitted from the study.

Another way of analyzing programs is in terms of kinds of settings. Responses were received from three kinds of settings. The bases for inclusion or omission were as follows:

1. Academic—Course work and academic credit is given. If the information received was considered to be from this type of setting, then the program was included in the study.

2. Treatment—Primary function is treatment and may offer practicum and/or internship experience but, if credit is receive, the credit is from an academic setting even though work is done in the treatment center. If the information received was considered to be from this type of setting,, then the program was omitted from the study.

3. Treatment plus Academic Credit—Primarily a treatment center but offers academic credit in course areas in addition to practicum and/or internship. If the information received was considered to be from this type of setting, then the program was included in the study.

Evaluation of whether or not to include a setting was based on data receive. In some cases, these data were not as sufficient as desired. We apologize for any errors. When included, we attempted to supply the data on which the decision was made. If we did omit or include when the opposite would have been more accurate, please let us know. By doing a national study with the intent of listing all when no sources could be found to identify preparation programs, we recognize that we opened ourselves to the possibility of error. We have attempted to omit errors; however, please help us know where we were unsuccessful.

INTERPRETATION OF DATA

Responses were primarily handwritten and in some cases were difficult to interpret. In those cases, the person keyboarding consulted with one or more other persons to assure as much accuracy as possible. Also, the person supplying the information may have interpreted the question differently than was intended. For example, the request was for clock hours of practicum and internship required. A few responses were listed as 3, 4, 6, 8, or 9, which may have been academic semester or quarter hours instead of clock hours.

As much as possible, data collection was designed to enable comparison of 1993 data with data in prior editions of the study. Intentions were to collate data and report information applicable and meaningful to the counseling profession. The 1993 data were compared to prior data to determine whether or not changes have occurred and, if so, in what direction. Trends are reported in Volume II: Status, Trends, and Implications.

Chapter 3

ACCREDITATION BODIES

Nationally accepted standards for course work and clinical experience in counselor/therapist preparation have evolved primarily in the last 25 years. Reasons causing those standards to be accepted widely include the following:

1. Professional acceptance by other mental health providers, educators, third-party payment providers, and the public, thus resulting in increased motivation by counselors and therapists to become recognized as a profession.

2. Insurance and third-party payment for counseling service, thus resulting in the need for standards as to who will be eligible for payment.

3. An increased number of programs offering counselor preparation, thus resulting in a desire to have means to evaluate the comprehensiveness of a program.

4. Public acceptance of counseling as a means to better health, thus resulting in the public needing to know the kind and quality of program from which a counselor graduated.

5. Legislation establishing State Certification or Licensure Boards, thus resulting in the need to have a measure of whether or not an applicant has received sufficient preparation for certification or licensure.

6. An increased number of agencies, businesses, and industries utilizing counselors, thus administrators and hiring officials needing to understand the quality of programs from which applicants graduated.

7. Counselors becoming organized, thus having an active voice in what their potential colleagues should receive in course work and clinical experience before graduation.

8. Establishment of accreditation bodies by professional organizations, thus creating a recognizing means and to some extent the feeling "we need to be accredited or we will lose out."

Accreditation bodies have an important influence upon what and how much curriculum content areas are taught, where and for how long clinical experiences occur, and what degree is accepted as an entry level for professional practice. Standards have existed for four decades; however, three of the five accreditation bodies that are recognized most often have been formed since the first edition of this book was published in 1971.

IMPORTANCE OF ACCREDITATION

The importance of accreditation no longer is questioned by the profession. More and more training institutions are applying for accreditation, and the number of accredited institutions is increasing yearly.

Important aspects of the total accreditation process are the publishing of standards and the encouragement of an institution to do a self-study before applying. Thus, preparation programs are able to review and, where applicable, revise programs so as to equal or exceed standards. As a result, changes are made internally to meet local situations but with sufficient breadth and depth to meet national standards.

The legal aspect of licensure and certification within recent years has enabled accreditation to take on new meaning. Students are concerned about the employment potential after graduation. Students are concerned about whether or not a program will provide sufficient quality preparation to become licensed, nationally certified, and eligible for third-party payment.

Another aspect of the relevance of accreditation is when students look for internship sites. Whether the program a student has attended is or is not accredited is a factor in determining whether a student is accepted as an intern at a given site. Beyond the scope of this book, but related, is the accreditation of internship sites. Accreditation of programs of academic preparation and accreditation of internship sites have changed counselor and therapist preparation. These changes have been most noticeable in the past two decades.

FIVE ACCREDITATION BODIES

Accreditation is a voluntary process, which means that an academic program must apply to the accreditation body from which they want to gain accreditation. Prior to applying, the faculty and administration generally have reviewed the accreditation standards/criteria and have modified, if needed, the program to meet the requirements at the time of application.

At the present time, five accreditation bodies are designed to accredit programs in counselor and therapist preparation. Each of the five has special areas. Programs preparing counseling psychologists apply to the American Psychological Association (APA); programs preparing marriage and family therapists apply to the American Association for Marriage and Family Therapy (AAMFT), or to the Council for Accreditation of Counseling and Related Educational Programs (CACREP); rehabilitation counseling programs apply to the Council on Rehabilitation Education (CORE); pastoral counseling programs apply to the American Association of Pastoral Counselors (AAPC); and preparatory programs for community counselors, mental health counselors, school counselors, student affairs practitioners in higher education, and counselor educators apply to CACREP.

American Association of Pastoral Counselors (AAPC)

AAPC accredits training programs and service centers. The training programs are for preparation of pastoral counselors and are of either approved or provisional approval.

The name, address, and telephone number are as follows:

American Association of Pastoral Counselors (AAPC)
9504A Lee Highway
Fairfax, VA 22031-2303
Tel (703) 385-6967

The number of approved programs as of January 29, 1993, and the number in each category were as follows:

30	Accredited Service Center & Approved Training Program (SCT)
5	Approved Training Programs (T)
1	Provisional Accreditation or Approval (PRV)
36	Total Programs

The specific programs are listed in Figure 3.1

American Psychological Association (APA)

APA accredits preparation programs at the doctoral level in clinical psychology, counseling psychology, school psychology, and combined professional-scientific psychology. Of these four preparation programs, counseling psychology is the one appropriate for programs included in this book. APA is a specialized accrediting body recognized by the Council on Postsecondary Accreditation (COPA) and the United States Department of Education.

APA accreditation is of three categories. Full accreditation is granted to any program that, in the professional judgement of the Committee, meets the criteria in a satisfactory manner. Provisional accreditation is granted to programs making initial application that do not meet all of the criteria, but for which the Committee believes there is a reasonable expectation that the criteria will be met within a foreseeable period of time. Probation is the category into which a fully accredited program is placed when the Committee has evidence that the program is not currently in satisfactory compliance with the criteria.

54	Full Accreditation (F)
5	Provisional Accreditation or Approval (PRV)
1	Probation (PRB)
60	Total programs

The specific programs are listed in Figure 3.1.

Commission on Accreditation for Marriage and Family Therapy Education (COAMFTE)

COAMFTE is the Commission on Accreditation (COA) of the American Association for Marriage and Family Therapy (AAMFT). COAMFTE accredits master's degree programs, doctoral programs, and post degree programs in marriage and family therapy throughout the United States and Canada. The Commission lists programs in process for accreditation and programs in process for candidacy status. The Commission has been recognized by the United States Department of Education since 1978 as the national accrediting body for marriage and family therapy education. A COAMFTE Manual on Accreditation outlines standards and procedures for accreditation.

The name, address, and telephone number are as follows:

The specific programs are listed in Figure 3.1.

Council for Accreditation of Counseling and Related Educational Programs (CACREP)

CACREP, incorporated in 1981, is a specialized accrediting body recognized by the Council on Postsecondary Accreditation (COPA). CACREP functions as an independent Council whose purpose is to implement standards of excellence for the counseling profession's graduate-level preparation programs. It is the accrediting arm for the American Counseling Association (ACA).

CACREP's scope of accreditation at the master's degree level includes community counseling, marriage and family counseling/therapy, mental health counseling, school counseling, and student affairs practice in higher education with emphases in counseling, development, or administration. CACREP accredits doctoral level programs in counselor education and supervision.

The name, address, and telephone number are as follows:

Council for Accreditation of Counseling and Related Educational Programs (CACREP)

The number of approved doctoral level programs as of January 1993 was as follows:

30 Counselor Education and Supervision (CE)

The specific programs are listed in Figure 3.1.

Council on Rehabilitation Education, Inc. (CORE)

CORE accreditation of rehabilitation counselor education (RCE) programs promotes the delivery of rehabilitation services to individuals with disabilities by fostering continuing review and improvement of master's and doctoral degree level RCE programs. CORE's accreditation process promotes program self-improvement rather than outside censure. CORE is a not-for-profit organization composed of two representatives from each of five national professional organizations concerned with rehabilitation counseling: National Council on Rehabilitation Education (NCRE), Council of State Administrators of Vocational Rehabilitation (CSAVR), National Association of Rehabilitation Facilities (NARF), National Rehabilitation Counseling Association (NRCA), and American Rehabilitation Counseling Association (ARCA).

CORE grants three types of accreditation. Candidate for Accreditation is granted to programs that are in the early stages of development or implementation, up to the point of graduating their first students. Preliminary Accreditation is granted to programs that have been fully operational for at least one year. This recognition provides evidence that a program complies with all standards except those having to do with the performance of graduates because sufficient time has not passed for the objective assessment of their professional performance. Accreditation is granted to programs that have been fully operational long enough to allow for the objective assessment of the professional performance of graduates. This recognition provides evidence that a program complies with all standards. CORE is a specialized accrediting body recognized by the Council on Postsecondary Accreditation (COPA).

The name, address, and telephone number are as follows:

Council on Rehabilitation Education, Inc. (CORE)
P O Box 1788
Champaign, IL 61824-1788
Tel (217) 333-6688

The number of approved programs as of November 1992 was as follows:

77	Accredited Master's Level Programs (A/M)
36	Accredited Doctoral Level Programs (A/D)
0	No programs in candidate status for 1993
0	No programs in preliminary accreditation status for 1993
113	Total Programs in 81 Preparation Institutions

The specific programs are listed in Figure 3.1.

ACCREDITED PROGRAMS

To show accredited programs by states and by institutions, a composite list from the five accreditation bodies is provided within this chapter. The list is alphabetical by state and alphabetical by institution within the state. Five columns are provided, one for each accreditation body. Abbreviations of accreditation are used as shown in the preceding section entitled "Five Accreditation Bodies."

Accreditation is an ongoing process. As a result, programs may be added or removed from time to time. To assure accuracy as to whether a specific program is or is not accredited at a given time, please contact the accreditation body. The address and telephone of each have been provided in the preceding section.

The composite list (Figure 3.1) is provided on the pages that follow.

ACCREDITATION LISTING

WITH EACH

INSTITUTION'S PROGRAM DATA

Supplied with each kind of program is a line showing accreditation if applicable. For determining accreditation of each program, the information was taken from the accreditation body's most recently published list rather than information supplied directly from the institution.

If an institution was not accredited, the accreditation line so indicates by the statement, "None Indicated."

CHI SIGMA IOTA

Chi Sigma Iota, the International Counseling Academic and Professional Honor Society, was established January 1, 1985. The impetus for forming an international honor society in counseling included a desire to provide recognition for outstanding academic achievement as well as outstanding service within the counseling profession. The formation of an honor society was seen as a fruitful avenue to provide a much needed link between students, educators, practitioners, and administrators in various counseling settings.

In 1988, negotiations were made with Rho Chi Sigma, the National Rehabilitation Counseling and Services Honor Society, concerning unification. Rho Chi Sigma merged into Chi Sigma Iota in March of 1989. This was a landmark move to unify rehabilitation counselors with the mainstream of the counseling profession.

CSI evolved as a consequence of the maturity of the counseling profession. While the scope of the Society is international, its focus is upon the personal and professional development of its individual members. CSI is committed to upholding the high standards of its members.

The purposes of Chi Sigma Iota, International, as noted in Article I of the By-Laws, are > "To promote scholarship, research, professionalism, and excellence in counseling, and to recognize high attainment in the pursuit of academic and clinical excellence in the field of counseling."

The goals of Chi Sigma Iota are achieved primarily through the activities of local chapters, and secondarily, through efforts of the Headquarters' staff and officers.

Since the time of its chartering, CSI as an organization, and many of its individual members, have assumed leadership roles at the state, regional, national, and international levels in promoting the counseling needs of persons of all ages as well as the concerns of counselors themselves.

In the eight years since establishment, more than 7,000 persons have been initiated with approximately two out of every three continuing to renew each year. As of 1993, more than 110 chapters are in operation.

For each academic program where a CSI chapter exists, a notation is made on data about that institution. Thus, each chapter is identified with the institution with which it is associated.

SUMMARY

Accreditation of counselor and therapist preparation programs has expanded in the past few years. As of 1993, more than 500 specific programs have received accreditation. In some cases, two or more accredited programs may be offered by a given academic institution.

Each of the five accreditation bodies specializes in one or more specific program(s). The overlap is minimal and occurs only in the marriage and family counseling/therapy area. Four of the five accreditation bodies accredit master's level programs and no accreditation is offered below the master's level. Four of the five accredit certain programs at the doctoral level. One (APA) approves programs at the doctoral level only.

The programs (majors) being accredited include the following, shown here with their respective accreditation bodies and degree levels:

Community Counseling (CACREP at the master's level)

Counseling Psychology (APA at the doctoral level)

Counselor Education and Supervision (CACREP at the doctoral level)

Marriage and Family Therapy (AAMFT at the master's and the doctoral levels)

Marriage and Family Counseling/Therapy (CACREP at the master's level)

Mental Health Counseling (CACREP at the master's level)

Pastoral Counseling (AAPC at the master's level)

Rehabilitation Counseling (CORE at the master's and the doctoral levels)

School Counseling (CACREP at the master's level)

Student Affairs Practice in Higher Education

With Counseling Emphasis (CACREP at the master's level)

With Developmental Emphasis (CACREP at the master's level)

With Administrative Emphasis (CACREP at the master's level)

Chapter 4

FORMAT FOR REPORTING DATA

Each institution's academic unit offering a counselor and/or therapist preparation program was asked to supply information on each master's and doctoral degree level program offered. These data are reported as received. Only original sources were used. If no response was received, then no information regarding the program is reported. However, names of those institutions and their mailing addresses as we know them are included in the appendix of this volume.

Most Data Collection Forms were completed with handwritten responses. Thus, every effort was made to reproduce accurately. We apologize for any misinterpretations.

To respond to feedback over the past three years from faculty, administrators, students, and other users of the Counselor Preparation book, the format of this book was changed from previous editions. Each program offered is reported separately to provide more specific individualized information. If a potential student wants a specific kind of program, he or she can review all such programs by states, by geographical region, or nationally.

Basic information is reported for each program. Thus, a comparison can be made as to how admission requirements, graduation requirements, clinical experience, placement of graduates, and uniqueness of one program may agree with or vary from another at the same or a different institution. These components are treated statistically and reported collectively in Volume II of this book.

A copy of one institution's report for one program is provided at the start of Chapter 8. Notations have been made to identify what, how, and where basic information is reported for each institution. Please recognize that all requested information was not always supplied, thus resulting in some institution's data being less comprehensive than may be shown for another institution.

All master's level programs are reported before doctoral level programs, and the program majors are always reported in alphabetical order (e.g., Master's Degree in Marriage and Family Counseling/Therapy is listed before Master's Degree in Rehabilitation Counseling).

ABBREVIATION USED

Some words were used repeatedly. To save space, abbreviations were used frequently. Abbreviations and the word or words for which they are used are shown in Figure 4.1.

EXPLANATION OF INFORMATION REPORTED

To facilitate location of institutions, they are listed by states. All states and territories are listed alphabetically and institutions are listed alphabetically within each state.

This institutional alphabetical listing by states and territories enables students to review easily those colleges and universities that are within a geographical area. The same ease is available for faculty who want to review other programs.

Department Name and Address

The title of the administrator for the program is provided, e.g., chairperson, director, coordinator. The title is followed by the name of the administrative unit and mailing address for any correspondence.

Telephone and Electronic Numbers

Changes in communication have provided new means for information transmission. To take advantage of these means, telephone, FAX, TDD, and E-Mail numbers and/or codes are listed.

Faculty and Related Information

The faculty within the institution who are involved in a teaching or supervisory role for the program are listed alphabetically. The listing of the faculty names, together with the department mailing address plus telephone and electronic numbers, will be an asset for communication.

For each faculty member, the institution was requested to supply degree held, time spent in the counselor and/or therapist preparation area, and the rank and/or title of the person. By reviewing data in this part of the report, the kind and highest degrees held by staff, the full-time equivalency (FTE) of staff, and their rank or titles can be obtained.

Courses May Add or Drop

As programs change, so do the courses offered. To reflect those changes, each administrative unit was asked to identify courses that may be added and those that may be dropped. A review of these may enable one to gain a perception of curricular changes.

Department Changes Anticipated

In addition to changes in courses, other changes often are anticipated, e.g., increase or decrease in faculty FTE, program offerings, clinical experience in total time and/or supervision, degree title, admission and/or graduation requirements, and number of students admitted. A review of these may help reflect changes within the department and implications for students, faculty, and programs.

Campus Chapter of the Counseling Society

To create an opportunity for student involvement and to provide recognition for outstanding academic achievement and service within the counseling profession, the Chi Sigma Iota International Counseling Academic and Professional Honor Society has established Chapters at colleges and universities. When a Chapter is at a specified administrative unit, the Chapter is noted with the Chapter name. The information for this entry was supplied by Chi Sigma Iota official list, obtained in March, 1993.

Information Regarding Each Degree Program

Information was requested for each degree program. The information request form was comparable from one degree program to another except for placement of graduates (where the listed placement settings were reflective of the major settings where graduates from each kind of program typically are placed).

Major. This section lists the title of the major at the institution.

Degree. The letters for the degree that is conferred upon graduation is listed in this section.

Accreditation. The accreditation, if any, as held for the degree, shown by any of the five (AAPC, APA, CACREP, COAMFTE, and CORE) accreditation organizations is indicated. The information for this entry was taken from the lists supplied by the five accreditation organizations. If a program was not identified as accredited, then the entry is shown as "none indicated."

Number of Students. The average number of students enrolled in the program each year is given as well as the average number of female and male graduates.

Admission Requirements. Information is supplied for admission criteria items usually considered, including Graduate Record Examination (T, V, Q, and A) and Miller Analogies Test scores; grade point average for undergraduate and graduate courses taken; number of required courses in psychology, counseling, and other areas; prior years of work experience required; number of letters of recommendation required; and whether or not an interview is required.

Graduation Requirements. The total academic credit hours required and whether the hours are in quarter hours (Q) or semester hours (S) are shown. Also shown are the required supervised clinical experience clock hours for practicum and internship.

Placement of Graduates. The average percentage of graduates placed in different settings was requested. Five settings were listed for each degree, plus an opportunity to indicate a different setting with percentage.

Uniqueness of Program. This section provides an opportunity to express in a few words what the institution considers as a uniqueness of the program. In some cases, the wording supplied was beyond the space provided and had to be edited. In those cases, we trust that we used words that reflect the uniqueness as expressed by the institution.

LISTING OF INSTITUTIONS AND PROGRAMS

Chapter 8 is a listing of all institutions that have one or more counselor and/or therapist preparation programs. Recognition needs to be made of four aspects of the list:

1. Institutions with Complete Data—These are ones that completed and returned the initial and comprehensive data form, and the programs meet the criteria for inclusion in this study.
2. Institutions with Some Data—These are ones that completed and returned the short form, and the programs meet the criteria for inclusion in this study.
3. Institutions Listed without Data—These are ones that may or may not have a counselor and/or therapist preparation program. No response was received from them after repeated requests. The list is in the appendix.
4. Institutions Not Listed But Did Supply Data—These are ones that, as far as we could deduct from information supplied, did not meet the criteria for inclusion in this study.

Chapter 5

MASTER'S LEVEL MAJORS AND INSTITUTIONS

At the master's degree level, accreditation for programs can be obtained in six areas: community counseling, marriage and family counseling/therapy, mental health counseling, rehabilitation counseling, school counseling, and student affairs practice in higher education (with emphasis in counseling, development, or administration). Majors are offered by a few institutions in counseling areas not within these six. In this Chapter, each of the six areas are listed plus a heading for "other counseling specialties." Following each area is a listing by states of all institutions offering that major. This enables a quick identification of all institutions in which each kind of program is offered. These six areas are listed alphabetically. The listing of majors and institutions offering "other counseling specialties" at the master's degree level is provided last. For analysis of these 1,056 programs by major areas, please see Volume II of this book.

DOCTORAL LEVEL MAJORS AND INSTITUTIONS

Majors for doctoral level programs are listed according to the three major areas accredited by the accreditation organizations and also by a fourth area labelled "other counseling specialties." For each of the four areas, the institutions are listed alphabetically by states. The specific program responses for each are supplied in Chapter 8 of this book, Volume I. For an analysis of these 176 programs by major areas, please see Volume II of this book.

DATA REPORTED BY INSTITUTIONS

Each administrative unit with a counselor preparation program was requested to submit information on each degreed program. Only primary data were used. If no information was received from the institution, no information is included in this chapter.

The Data Collection Form was completed primarily by hand, which in some cases caused the information to be open to interpretation. If the wording or number supplied was open to interpretation, a second person was asked to interpret. If interpretations were the same, the information was included. If differences in interpretation occurred, the information was omitted. We welcome comments to help correct any errors that may have occurred.

In Figure 8.1 is a sample report for an institution on one degreed program. Notations have been added to identify what, how, and where basic information is reported.

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

JOSEPH W. HOLLIS

Dr. Joseph W. Hollis is Chairperson and Professor Emeritus, Department of Counseling Psychology and Guidance Services, Ball State University, Muncie, Indiana. Active in psychology throughout his professional life, he has served as consultant, counselor, and teacher. For eight years prior to his involvement as faculty member in counselor preparation in Indiana, he was a counselor, teacher, and director of guidance in school systems in Missouri.

Certified as psychologist, private practice in Indiana, Joe is an active member in various professional activities at local, state, and national levels. Many years have been spent participating in the development of the Indiana certification patterns for psychologists, counselors, and other helping professionals.

For 13 years, Joe was editor of Infochange for the Association for Humanistic Education and Development, and he continues to give his time in professional organizations. He has served as president of state guidance associations in two different states; as president of a national association (Association for Humanistic Education and Development); as Board of Directors member and senator for several years for American Personnel and Guidance Association; on the Editorial Board for the national publication, The Vocational Guidance Quarterly; and as a member of various committees in psychology and counseling associations.

Psychological reports have been a major tool in his work as consultant, counselor, vocational expert, and author. The consultative work was with lawyers, state, and national government offices, businesses and industries, colleges, and school systems. For 30 years Joe was a vocational expert for the U.S. Government Office of Hearings and Appeals.

Writing is an ongoing activity of Joe's. He has authored or co-authored 14 books including Psychological Report Writing; Career and Life Planning; Pupil Personnel Staff and Program Development Using LORS Experiential Technique; Counselor Education Directory: Personnel and Programs; Personalizing Information Processes; Dictionary of Abbreviations and Acronyms in Helping Professions; and Organizing for Effective Guidance. Journal articles authored or co-authored by Joe have been published in various journals. He co-authored more than 100 newspaper articles entitled "Between Parent and Counselor."

Joe takes an active role professionally as researcher, speaker, workshop leader, and lecturer. He has special interests in client's expectations and extent of fulfillment by different counseling techniques and theoretical positions. Career development and life planning have been a major concern to Joe, which causes him to research priorities, thrusts, and flexibility of one's energy commitments. He has researched stages of psychological regression caused by long-term unemployment.

Membership in various organizations includes the American Psychological Association, Division 17, Counseling Psychology; Indiana Psychological Association; and American Counseling Association and various divisions.

Awards for writing, for distinguished service to the profession, as outstanding alumni (University of Missouri - Kansas City) and as outstanding counselor-educator have been presented to Joe. Recognition has been given in publications such as the Dictionary of International Biography, Creative and Successful Personalities of the World, Contemporary Authors, International Scholars Directory, Community Leaders of America, Men of Achievement, American Men and Women of Science: Social and Behavioral Sciences, Who's Who in the Midwest, International Who's Who in Community Service, National Register of Prominent Americans and International Notables, and National Register of Health Service Providers in Psychology.
